Technical characteristics

Niels Römer draws inspiration from the submerged ball of a flower bouquet with a focus on the perfect symmetry of the intertwined stems. In this way, he artistically renders the “invisible part of the iceberg”. The choice of a matte white enamelled porcelain finish allows the suggestion of alternate sources of inspiration: an alluring Caribbean shell, or perhaps the motion of the tulle tutu of a Degas dancer. Vase in moulded biscuit porcelain with matte enamelled interior and exterior and biscuit base.
