Description

The T vase is a beautiful piece of craftsmanship made from glass which is first blown, then scuffed. One of the branches of the 'T' takes the vase, with the others supporting stems or branches. Vases may be interlocked to create a compact group, improved by the fact that T is available in 3 soft, harmonious and easily groupable colorways. These vases required two years of design development since their shape is achieved by a complex procedure: the glass is blown onto a platform while the mold is rotated. This technique requires great dexterity and must be done very quickly. Once a piece has cooled, it is scuffed by hand to create a cloudy effect. Because of this process, each piece is unique, and all vases are signed by the designer. Vase in matt finish molded mouth-blown glass (with a brushed effect).
